

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I take this opportunity today to thank the ‘unknown power’ that resides in all of us that made this work possible. This unknown power within me made me think through issues, come back with complete new fervor when I felt down and frustrated, and helped me to complete this thesis. I heartily thank Dr. P.V Xavier, Guide and Associate Dean of School of Liberal Studies and Education who allowed me to have freedom of thought right from my ideation into the area till it got completed. He also directed and reinforced me wherever needed. He was a powerful base for this important task that I undertook. I wholeheartedly thank Professor Thomas Vaddaya, an expert into the area and also part of research committee who gave his valuable suggestions into the thesis and crucial instructions and directives wherever needed. It was because of his insights into this area that made this work possible. I thank Dr. Rishi Raj Balwaria who helped me to understand key points of research and gave his valuable time for important suggestions throughout the research. I thank Ms. Valli Pillai for her support in allowing me to conduct the Intervention Program smoothly in B.Ed. I further thank Dr. Mandira Sikdar, Head, Ph.D Program for her logistic support in the entire Ph.D journey. I genuinely thank Navrachana University and my B.Ed Program mentors who made me realize the potential in me to do Ph.D.

I also thank Dr. Archana Tomar and Dr. Vandana Talegaonkar for their effort in pushing things when there was a phase that had lot of self-doubts. I also would like to show my gratitude towards all the experts who gave their time and suggestions for validating the intervention program.

I also thank from the bottom of my heart Ms. Sangeeta Podar, who has been a great friend and colleague to me. She rendered her opinions, whenever and wherever needed, along with the support that I needed in favourable and adverse times.

I also thank Navrachana University and its administration for allowing me to implement the program with complete access to the facilities. I, with bottom of my heart, thank the student teachers, who were the part of the Pilot Study as well as the final intervention program. Without their comprehensive participation, this would not have been possible. I further thank Ms Miti Nagar for her relentless ideas, and for the time she gave in her demanding routine, for certain multifarious tasks that were required for the thesis.

I thank my ever supporting Parents and my Son Ryan who went out of their way to help me deal with this overarching task. My Parents stood by me all the times. I also thank my Husband, my Brother Dr. Vishal Gawarikar, his Wife Ruee, his Daughters Radha and Uma for their ultimate love at all times. I thank all my relatives along with my Uncle Rajendra Deobhakta who kept on motivating me to be on the task. Lastly I thank my dog 'Kut' who made me feel better and important at all times.

Finally, I thank 'GOD', without whom this would not have been possible at all. I also lastly thank and respect the 'TIME' that allowed me to use it effectively.
